Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 10 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Changeable but becoming milder. Very windy in northwest Sunday night.

This Evening and Tonight:
Evening showers fading leaving most areas dry and cold with clear spells. Frosty, particularly in the east but temperatures rising in the west later with increasing cloud and some rain for Northern Ireland. A few fog patches over eastern England.

Saturday:
Chilly start and bright at first in the east. Cloud and outbreaks of rain already in the far west then moving eastwards. Milder than Friday, particularly in the west.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Very windy Sunday night in the far northwest, brighter conditions with showers following. Elsewhere cloudy with persistent rain at times but often dry and bright in the southeast. Mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.